Mr. Weisberg.

Thank you very much for responding so quickly. Enclosed is my order form and money order for two of your books.

I assume you Mr. Weisberg, you do not have to remind me to look both ways before I cross the street or that there are two sides to every story. As I told you before, I have been researching this case for more than 10 years. I am a big boy and can raise my level of critical thinking to the point that I can realize what is fact and theory. However, you must concur that our government has blurred this story so much that it would be dangerous to dismiss any theory no matter how silly it may seem. We need to consider all possibilities ... not just the ones that are comfortable or immediately agreed upon.

I have done a lot of reading and I am always hungry and anxious for more. I was hoping for a little more encouragement from you since we need more young people getting involved. I wasn't even my parent's fantasy in 1963 ... yet I am still obsessed with trying to make sense of this tragedy. I would think that kind of dedication and passion should be commended, not given grandfatherly advice.

If you question my sources, here is a bibliography of the material I have read.

- Best Evidence by David Lifton
- Accessories After the Fact by Sylvia Meagher
- Rush to Judgment by Mark Lane
- "They've killed the President" by Sam Anson
- The unanswered questions... by Sylvia Fox
- Crossfire by Jim Marrs
- The Death of a President by William Manchester
- The Warren Commission Report & various volumes
- The House Select Committee on Assassinations Report and various volumes
- Reasonable Doubt by Henry Hurt
- Contract on America by David Scheim
- Mafia Kingfish by John Davis
- CIA and the Cult of Intelligence by Victor Marchetti
- High Treason by Livingstone and Groden

Regardless of what you think of these books, they are all different and say different things. We need the theories, speculations, conjectures, rumors, gossip, and the facts to get to the answer. Please don't admonish me for wanting to read and learn it all.

Thank you for your time... hope to hear from you soon.
